Compensation Disclosure

Wells Fargo receives compensation for the services provided to the Plan through various sources, including recordkeeping fees, investment management fees, and other service-related payments. The specific compensation arrangements are designed to align with industry standards and reflect the comprehensive nature of our service offering.¹

Direct Compensation

The Plan pays Wells Fargo an annual recordkeeping fee of $42 per participant for core recordkeeping services. This fee covers account maintenance, transaction processing, and participant communications. Additional fees may apply for enhanced services or special projects as mutually agreed upon.

Indirect Compensation

Wells Fargo may receive additional compensation from certain investment providers in connection with investments offered through the Plan. This compensation varies by investment option and may include revenue sharing, sub-transfer agency fees, and other customary arrangements. Such compensation is generally paid from the investment funds' existing expense ratios and does not result in additional direct charges to participants.²

For Wells Fargo proprietary funds, Wells Fargo receives investment management fees as disclosed in each fund's prospectus. These fees are included in the expense ratios shown in the investment menu above and are used to cover investment management, distribution, and administrative services.

In the event of termination, Wells Fargo will work cooperatively to ensure a smooth transition of services to a successor provider. Reasonable transition assistance fees may apply depending on the scope and complexity of the transition services required.

Conflicts of Interest

Wells Fargo has financial interests in certain investment options offered through the Plan, including the Wells Fargo Target Date Funds and other proprietary funds. While Wells Fargo has policies and procedures designed to identify and manage potential conflicts of interest, plan fiduciaries should consider these relationships when making decisions regarding the Plan's investment menu. Wells Fargo believes that its proprietary funds offer competitive features and pricing relative to comparable market alternatives.

Fiduciary Status

Wells Fargo does not serve as a fiduciary to the Plan with respect to the services described in this disclosure, except to the extent Wells Fargo provides discretionary investment management services for specific investment options. The Plan's named fiduciaries retain full responsibility for selecting and monitoring service providers and investment options.

Important Disclosures and Footnotes

² Revenue Sharing Arrangements: Certain mutual fund companies pay Wells Fargo revenue sharing ranging from 0.05% to 0.35% of average daily fund assets held by Plan participants. These payments compensate Wells Fargo for recordkeeping, administrative support, and distribution services. For the Wells Fargo Target Date Funds specifically, Wells Fargo and its affiliates retain the full investment management fee as disclosed in each fund's prospectus, which may include components for investment management, fund operations, distribution (12b-1), and administrative services. The precise allocation among these components is proprietary to Wells Fargo's fund management operations.

 Sub-Transfer Agency Fees: Wells Fargo receives sub-transfer agency fees from various fund companies for maintaining participant account records and processing transactions. These fees generally range from $15 to $35 per participant account per year, depending on the specific fund company and services provided. Sub-TA fees are paid by the investment funds and are in addition to revenue sharing payments described above.

Fee Competitiveness

Wells Fargo believes its fee structure is competitive with industry standards for plans of similar size and complexity. However, we do not provide comparisons to specific alternative providers or investment options, as such comparisons would require detailed analysis of service levels, features, and participant needs that may vary significantly across providers.
